What is anorexia nervosa?

Anorexia nervosa is a distorted body image that overestimates personal body fatness and an eating disorder affecting mainly girls or women, although boys or men can also suffer from it. It usually starts in the teenage years. It is estimated that about one out of every 100 adolescent girls has the disorder. Caucasians are more often affected than people of other racial backgrounds, and anorexia is more common in middle and upper socioeconomic groups. The overwhelming desire to become thin drives people with anorexia nervosa to refuse to eat even when they are hungry. Although adults often describe people with anorexia as "model students" their personal lives are usually marred by low self-esteem, social isolation and unhappiness. Anorexia nervosa cannot be self-diagnosed.

We can characterise the people with this disease by their body because their weight is maintained at least 15 per cent below that expected for a person's height. It is self-induced weight loss caused by avoiding fattening foods and may involve taking
